

Concept for an Intergenerational Digital Storytelling Project

The New Fallbrook Senior Center is evolving and recently has emerged from a nearly year-long process of needs assessment, surveys, interviews, and strategic planning with an exciting vision for the future,

And it includes moving more into Intergenerational Programming.

We are looking to establish a regional Storytelling Project that puts young digital story producers together with elders (“Vintage Fallbrookians”) in our community to discover, and artfully produce brief stories mounted in a specific, compelling “digital storytelling” format.

Our mission is to engage and support our growing “senior” population in healthy, meaningful, and ACTIVE ways.

I have edited together a brief video capturing the experiences of other schools and organizations in implementing such programming. After viewing this, please consider if you might like to talk and explore how this works, and whether there is a possibility for collaboration in any way.

A theme being considered for the project is ...

“Sharing Our Past & Creating the Future Together”

I am a recent addition to the re-formed Fallbrook Senior Center Board and have designed and implemented similar projects in the past.

I have provided on the second sheet some links to view examples of “digital stories” as we are conceiving the project, as part of a larger intention to become the Storytelling Center for the area... emerging from the intergenerational linking of elders and youth. On behalf of our Board, I hope to hear back from you, even if it is to suggest another organization that may have interest in partnering, supporting, participating!
